York Harbor, Maine. Owing to the return of the 26th New England division to the states, the original plan was modified to the extent of allowing the New England boys to meet a nut by their own labor.

There was pressing, but that was a small thing, only the eager beneficiaries of the scheme on their mettle. Foundations had to be leveled. French municipal authorities had to be dealt with for the site and for the location of sewer, water and electrical connections; one car of material carrying the floor joists was astray and other timbers had to be cut at a local mill. Notwithstanding all these difficulties, the boys which is the largest one used by the A. E. F. was erected. New England stone fireplace and lattice chimneys all complete in a space of time that made the good people of Le Mans rub their eyes in amazement.

Suitably decorated for the dedication ceremony the big hut was turned over by the 26th division to the American Embarkation Center for use of the American army on its way home.

George W. Perkins of the National War Work Council made the formal presentation to the 26th, whose commanding officer, Major General Harry C. Hays, acknowledged its acceptance on behalf of the division.

After the war the hut will be

German African Veteran
Reorganizing Marine Corps

(Correspondence Associated Press) WITH AMERICAN ARMY OF OCCUPATION, April 15.—In the opinion of American army officers who follow day by day the process of demobilization and readjustment of enemy forces it appears likely that General von Lettow-Vorbeck, the German commander who returned to Germany in March from Africa, is

FISHERMEN ARE
COINING MONEY

(Correspondence Associated Press) HULL, Eng., April 18. Fortune from fish are being piled up by the skippers operating out of Hull. All through the war their profits were so tremendous that they now constitute a kind of local plutocracy. They have town houses and country houses and garages filled with motor cars.

There are now about 50 skippers working their vessels out of this port. The majority are rough sailors, with a rule-of-thumb knowledge of navigation, and curious ideas about the best way to spend their huge earnings.

For several years many of them have been netting from $40,000 to $50,000 annually. One is said to have averaged close on to $60,000.

A record is held by the skipper of a trawler which last fall made the round voyage twice within six weeks, returning from the first trip with a little less than $100,000 worth of fish and from the second with a little more than that amount. The skipper's net profit from the two trips was something like $20,000. The second voyage lasted only 17 days.

Owners of the fishing craft, who take none of the risks the skippers face, make even more money. A boat which hardly would have been thought worth sending to sea before the war can be counted on now to bring in net profits at the rate of more than $100,000 a year. Wild speculations are going on in trawlers, the boats changing hands at ridiculous prices.

It is a gamble against time, for when the trawlers now engaged in money-making are released from that work the fishing fleet here will be tripled and fish profits will drop accordingly.

robustly uniting under his command all the loyal marine units.

Writing in the "Daily Telegraph" of London, one of the American experts who specializes upon the movement of German armed forces, says: "Such a division (marines) will be expected to be one of the most powerful instruments of the present government, and might even be a revolutionary power."

Owing to the popular representation of the services of the marines during the war and to the initiation of the revolution last November, numerous marines have been seen in Germany during the past few months seeking to capitalize the revolution. So many of them, however, were turned into rubber bands composed of men in marine uniforms who never served in the marine service, that it is the average German civilian who begins to look upon any man in a marine uniform as a probable thief.

During the war, however, the status of the marine units has been clearing up and from information gathered by the third army officers it is now possible to give a general idea of the marine units. It is in the summaries of intelligence issued daily by the third army of the American officers says:

"The marine units in the sequence of doubtful loyalties have been considered first. Most important of these is the Volkmarine division, which went over to the Spartacists in the January and March revolts in Berlin, but has now been suppressed in Berlin. However, it has a branch in Braunschweig of clearly Spartacist purpose. Many who were prominent in the disaffected unit in Berlin are now in this unit, which appears to be the foundation of the present Spartacist control of Braunschweig. At least two Storm Guard units of marines are known one at Munich and one at Frankfurt on Main. Neither of these has been fairly tried, but both are unquestionably of strong Spartacist leanings.

"Supporting Milken, von Man Noke and the present movements are several marine units of doubtful loyalty, which appear to be nearly all to be in the present control of General von Lettow-Vorbeck, the German commander who returned from Africa in March.

Most important of these is the 1st Marine Brigade or Marine Brigade, which is under Colonel von Hildebrand. This was organized in Kiel, offered (voluntarily) by officers of the 1st (1918) Marine Division. It was supposed to be a large part in the restoration of order in Berlin, especially at Lankensberg in March.

El Paso is believed to be the first school where boxing is being taught by the third army officers. It is now possible to give a general idea of the marine units. It is in the summaries of intelligence issued daily by the third army of the American officers says:
